

TATTOO REMOVAL

POST-TREATMENT INSTRUCTIONS

- On completion of a tattoo removal treatment, patients may experience minor discomfort and redness. This discomfort will subside quickly.
- However, the redness will last for 24-48 hours. Once the redness is gone.
- The treated area will look similar to the way it did prior to treatment. Pinpoint bleeding may also occur.
- Patients may wash the treated area as normal.
- It is recommended that the treated area be covered with an occlusive ointment or transparent dressing for 1 week.
- The body will absorb the broken-up ink, and the area should be retreated every 8 weeks.
- Multiple treatments are typically required
